Low Sunday

Vol. 11, Number 22
Although those who choose cremation usually do so for economic reasons and rarely as an explicit way to manifest unbelief in the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, there may be implicit lack of appreciation for the significance of this teaching. Scattering ashes in particular conveys a message contrary to this belief in that it seems to communicate that the ash remains are simply being discarded since the person’s bodily existence has come to an end. Certainly God is almighty and will raise the dead and visiting their graves in the cemetery are ways for people of faith to express their belief in the resurrection of the dead and their bodily existence after death, not just their ash remains. The church clearly prefers and urges that the presence of the body better expresses the values of the church affirms in these rites (no. 413). The Appendix on Cremation goes on to state that the “cremated remains should be buried in a grave or entombed in a mausoleum or columbarium. The practice of scattering cremated remains on the sea, from the air, or on the ground, or keeping cremated remains in a home of a relative or friend, is not the reverent disposition that the church requires (no. 417).”

From the Pastor’s Desk:

Is Cremation allowed?

Low Sunday

This last truth of our faith, the “resurrection of the body” (as we say in the Apostles’ Creed) or the “resurrection of the dead” (as we say in the Nicene Creed), is the reason why Christian burial of the body is preferred by the church over cremation. When the Code of Canon Law was revised in 1983, cremation, which had previously been forbidden, was permitted only to those who chose the cremation of their bodies for reasons contrary to the Catholic faith (canon 1184). An example of a “reason contrary to the Catholic faith” would be those who choose cremation as a way to manifest unbelief in the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead.

The Appendix on Cremation in the Order of Christian Funerals states: “Although cremation is now permitted by the church, it does not have the same value as burial of the body. The church clearly prefers and urges that the body of the deceased be present for the funeral rites, since the presence of the human body better expresses the values which the church affirms in those rites” (no. 413). The Appendix on Cremation goes on to state that the “cremated remains should be buried in a grave or entombed in a mausoleum or columbarium. The practice of scattering cremated remains on the sea, from the air, or on the ground, or keeping cremated remains in a home of a relative or friend, is not the reverent disposition that the church requires (no. 417).”
